ABSTRACT

The marketing mix is a “mix of ingredients to create an effective marketing offer for the target market. The increased attention to the application of marketing concepts in the services sector has brought into question what the key components or / elements of a marketing mix for services are, or what they should be. The traditional 4 p’s of the marketing mix-“Product, Price, Physical Distribution and Promotion” are derived from a much a longer list developed from the Haward Business school in 1960’s, the original list consisted of 12 elements including plan, Branding, Personal selling, packaging, fact- finding and analysis. A distribution channel is a set of independent organizations involved in the process of making a product or service available to the consumer or business user⁵. Traditionally distribution systems are used to move tangible products from the manufacturer to the customer. In the hospitality industry, distribution systems are used to bring the customer to the product supplier – the hotel/ restaurant. In the hotel industry the distribution of services is mainly related to the transmission of information to the ultimate consumer and convincing him to approach the service provider to experience the best of the required service. Dept of Tourism, Government of India is the apex body which will accord approval and award star category which in turn help market positioning of the hotel. Hotels do maintain good repport with Department of Tourism at central and state levels to procure business from it, treating it as a corporate client. They get business from the department, out of package tours, fairs and exhibitions and special conventions organized by the Department of Tourism. They reported 2-5 per cent business.

• Key Words: Marketing; Marketing Channels; Marketing Mix; Marketing Physical Distribution;

• INTRODUCTION:

The purpose of business is to create and maintain satisfied and profitable customers. Customers are attracted and retained when their needs are met. The marketing concept holds that achieving the organizational goals depends on determining the needs and wants of target markets and delivering the desired satisfaction more effectively and efficiently than competitors. Almost all organizations including the hospitality have been adopting the marketing concept. The marketing process is defined as “The process of (a) analyzing marketing opportunities (b) selecting target market (c) developing marketing mix and (d) managing the marketing effort”¹. Customers are at the centre of marketing process. Through market segmentation, targeting and positioning, the organization divides the total market into smaller segments, selects segments it can best serve and focuses on serving and satisfying these segments. It then designs a marketing mix to produce the response it wants in the target market.

• OBJECTIVES OF THE STUDY:

MARKETING MIX FOR SERVICES

The marketing mix is a "mix of ingredients to create an effective marketing offer for the target market. The increased attention to the application of marketing concepts in the services sector has brought into question what the key components or / elements of a marketing mix for services are, or what they should be. The traditional 4 p's of the marketing mix- "Product, Price, Physical Distribution and Promotion" are derived from a much a longer list developed from the Haward Business school in 1960's, the original list consisted of 12 elements including plan, Branding, Personal selling, packaging, fact- finding and analysis. Expand Marketing Mix for services including Hospitality: Overtime the 4 p's were widely accepted for product marketing mix. However, the special characteristics of services posing challenges to management have led service marketers to conclude that they can use additional variables to satisfy service customers and adopt the concept of an expanded marketing mix for services. The expanded list includes 5,7 and 11 elements also. Notwithstanding the divided opinion on the number, majority of the authors on marketing including great personalities like Philip Kotler Zithmal and Bitner Lovelock etc., have considered 7 p's the optimal mix of services. They are

- Product; Price; Physical distribution; Promotion; People; Process, and Physical Evidence.

However as rightly observed by Phillip Kotler, "The issue is not whether there should be 4, 7 or 10- p's so much as what framework is most helpful in designing marketing strategy"². Marketing mix is mixture of strategies that is used by the management to accomplish the objectives and goals. To adopt it management has to make decisions about each element in the mix and determine how people will respond to the strategies separately and in combination. All the decisions about the marketing mix strategies then become the strategic marketing plan. "A marketing mix like a football team, calls for a collaborative effort among players, each member contributing to success in a different yet important way³. Against this background of the widely accepted optimal mix of 7 p's for services marketing, this chapter has analyzed the strategies relating to the first 4p's in the selected sample star hotels .

PHYSICAL DISTRIBUTION MIX

Like other organization, the hotel industry also needs a sound distribution strategy to extend its services to the ultimate consumers. “If we view properties as the heart of a hotel company, Distribution systems can be viewed as company’s circulatory system”⁴. Notwithstanding that hotel services are offered at the point of production, channels still play an outstanding role. Perishable / Non-storable nature of hotel products/ services adds to the significance of their timely distribution. In today's competitive environment it is not enough to count on a central reservation system and own sales force. Hotels must develop increasingly integrated and comprehensive distribution networks. Innovative ways of approaching new and existing markets are needed. Globalization facilitates foreign partnership / alliance and the hotels therefore have to tap new resources. New electronic distribution methods have to be availed of for effective communication with customers.

A distribution channel is a set of independent organizations involved in the process of making a product or service available to the consumer or business user⁵. Traditionally distribution systems are used to move tangible products from the manufacturer to the customer. In the hospitality industry, distribution systems are used to bring the customer to the product supplier – the hotel/ restaurant. In the hotel industry the distribution of services is mainly related to the transmission of information to the ultimate consumer and convincing him to approach the service provider to experience the best of the required service.

Channel members:

Many specialized channels are available to hospitality and travel organizations, the important among them are: Travel agents, Tour wholesalers, In - house selling, Telemarketing. Internet, Transport organizations, direct mail, Alliances, Franchising. Department of Tourism etc. A hotel manager, first choose the intermediaries that will make up the distribution system and number of levels that the distribution system will have. Once members and levels have been selected, the focus shifts to managing the channel. A number of factors are found influencing the distribution process such as the locations of the point of sales, the cost of distribution, the effectiveness of marketing efforts and the image of the hotel.

Role of channel members:

- Business location:

One of the most important aspects of distribution for hospitality organization is location. For businesses whose customers come to them, convenient location is prime contributor. This is due to fact that a well located small business also can often be sure of an adequate flow of customers to its area. Hotel sites are evaluated on the attractiveness of their location to persons coming to that destination. Competition, growth potential and accessibility of the different areas will be evaluated. The location must not only be favorable at present time but also must continue to be good throughout the life of the business. Selection of site forms a critical part of strategic marketing.

- Travel Agents:

The development of hotel industry is substantially influenced by the development of the travel industry. The travel agents are found playing a significant role in both the industries. Travel agents book the hotel rooms / accommodation on behalf of their customers as per the preferences of the Customers. Travel agencies offering tour packages have linkage with hotels which suit the target customers of the tour and patronage them. Almost all the hotels are found linked to the travel agents who make available to their clients the necessary information regarding booking, reservation and confirmation. Hotels motivate travel agents through competitive commission charges, quick settlements and wide publicity in their websites, brochures and advertisements.

- Global network:

Central Reservation system, International sales offices and Consortium are the latest tools used by hoteliers also to extend their distribution network globally. Internet Reservation system provides a person the facility to book any of the hotels any where in the world which is a member of this group. Hotel chains have their own central reservation systems also. Internet is the latest technology used by the hotel customers to know of the hotel and book the rooms. The websites of the hotels or business travel portals related to the hotel industry introduce the hotel and have with them an online intention to reserve the hotel room has to fill in his details and other requirements of the hotel. He will immediately get the online confirmation and hotels also show the room availability position to the customers to plan accordingly.

- In-House selling:

In- House selling is defined as “promoting a sale informing the consumer of the variety products and services available in the hotel and benefits and advantages of using these products and services”⁶. The restaurants, bar, accommodation and banquet rooms are the services to be sold and receptionists, waiters, barmen and the sales executives are the personnel meant for this purpose. Further, it is essential to have informative signs, directional signs, displays (menu cards, brochures, tariff cards etc.,) to facilitate in-house selling.

- Telemarketing:

Telephone marketing, also known as tele-marketing in the USA, has gained popularly the world over, for selling of the services provided by hotels. We find this method of selling reactive to enquiries and proactive to target customers. Its use for selling to the general public has undergone radical changes in the last decade. It may play a much larger role in the hotel marketing in future. It is also found cost effective and can be used successfully for selling these services and generating substantial revenues. Telephone selling saves a lot of time and can be remarkably effective.

- Marketing executives:

Marketing executives, who are a part of hotel organization, also canvass business by meeting the corporate clients, big organizations and institutions with package/discount offers under different schemes.

- Alliance/ franchising:

This is the most common type of distribution in services, with franchiser’s licensing their brand name, business process or formats, unique products, services, or reputation in return for fee and royalties. “Franchising”⁷ works well with services that can be standardized and duplicated through the delivery process, service policies, warranties, guarantees, promotion and branding. Examples include- Mc Donals, Burger king, Red Roof Inns, Starbucks, Coffee Houses, Choice Hotels, Holiday Inns, Pizza Hut, Ramada, and Marriott etc. The franchisee gets the advantage of being part of reservation and sales system which ensures a certain level of business which may not be available otherwise. The franchise also benefits from the image of franchiser, professional advice and training provided by the franchiser. In the process, he improves his own operational image and efficiently. The franchiser also benefits as his investment is not required in the franchisees properties. At the same time, the franchiser’s distribution system is expanded and the franchisee is well motivated to succeed in his own business.

- Co- operative marketing:

This implies passing on traffic overflow from one hotel to its neighbour on a reciprocal basis without effecting regular business with the main intermediaries in the distribution system. Apart from the above, there are other categories of mediators like the Cabman / Taxi wallahs who bring the customers to the hotels through their recommendations. These sources are however, utilized more by customers of budget hotels.
